people of the district. THERE is something beautiful and touching in the love subsisting between the democratic party and Mr. Tilden. The national convention paused yesterday in the midst of its momentous deliberations to send the feeble old gentleman a message of admiration and affec-

THE irreconcilable difficulties with which the democratic platform committee struggled for thirty-six unhappy iours were transferred to the convention last night for settlement, Morrison bringing in a majority report and Butler a minority report. bunting period the Herald was the conspicuous champion of the southern slaveholders who came into the free states in pursuit of their property. We should like to know what the southern democrats think of a cartoon illustrating the capture of a fugitive negro family by a southern slave driver?

THE New York Herald is doing its best cratic party. Witness the following from the leading editorial of yesterday:

Kelly is at last only a poor, shallow bully, and Grady rattles around, making as much noise as two tin cans tied to the tail of a fright-ened pap. And what does it all amount to Neither of them knows the temper of a na tional convention. They seem to imagine they are in Tammany Hall, laying down the law to the city aldermen and those descendants of the Irish kings who sweep the streets of the city at so much a day. They are out of their clement in Chicago, and are talking to men who regard them as desperate gamblers making a loud bluff on a small hand, and the zore reckless because they mean to cheat. It , however, a singular spectacle in our poli es that Tammany Hall, which is actually for laine, and means to support him, no matter that man the democrats nominate, should be crated so long in its attempt to divide the necratic councils and weaken the democ

'N commenting on the President's veto the Fitz-John Porter bill the New irk Evening Post says:

What is curious about this is, that a reference of the Army Register shows that congress and the President have in no less than ten other cases concurred in doing the very thing which the President now says congress has no right to do, and which he thinks it would be inproper for him to do—that is, in restoring to his rank in the service an officer wrongfully dismissed by sentence of court-martial. These cases are those of Surgeon General Hammond, Capt. George A. Ariaes, Lieut. Edward R. Clarke, Maj. Joseph B. Collins, Capt. James B. Sinclair, Capt. P. W. Stanhope, Capt. Thomas B. Hunt, Maj. N. H. McLean, Lieut. Lowell A. Chamberlain, and Capt. George T. Olmstead. They may be found in the Army Register, and they are, taken in connection with the Presi-dent's veto and the votes of many of the sen-ators, rather odd reading.

This is very disingenuous. It may also be found in the Army Register that all the cases referred to were disposed of by President Arthur's predecessors, but the Post's uncandid article is designed to convey the impression that they came before him for approval or rejection. President Arthur's objection. tion to the unconstitutional encroachment of congress upon the executive appointing power was filed in the first case that came before him for action, and that case chanced to be that of Fitz-John Porter.

An Answer to President Ellot. The Boston Journal of July 8 publishes a letter from Hon, Edward McPherson, in reply to the speech delivered by President Ellot at the meeting of the Boston in "pondents." Mr. McPherson shows that even the learned president of a university can make very loose statements when ho undertakes to deal with matters to which he has given no special study. People possessing ordinary familiarity but he surprised at the lack of accurate information exhibited by a man so distinguished for his attainments in science and philosophy. When subjected to the test of a critical analysis, as applied by Mr. McPherson, his speech becomes a tring of vapid assertions, without coherence and without truth.

President Eliot flads fault with the platform because it is not "clear and unambigious." Mr. McPherson takes up the several propositions of the platform with the course of political events cannot recessly what the convention intended, and that us a whole they constitute a sound body of political doctrine. No question affecting the interests of the people is alleged ambiguity, for he forthwith proceeded to take the negative of the

When discussing the civil service plank in the platform, President Ellot said:
"When men like Blaine and Logan, whose whole lives show they do not believe in it, place themselves on a platform with the civil service) principle, they commit a gross immorality and do a great mischief to the public mind." Mr. McPherson convicts President Ellot of the grossest ignorance of Mr. Blaine's public record upon this question. More than two years ago Mr. Blaine toid Senator Mitchell, at that time chairman of the senate committee on civil services reform, that he was propositions most offensive to the "Indadecidedly in favor of the proposed legislation, and a few months later Harper's

Weekly credited him with having outlined in the campaign in Maine a plan by which security and moderate tenure could be obtained for all persons in public employment. Mr. Blaine was not in the senate when the civil service law was passed or he no doubt would have voted for it. His brief experience in President Garfield's esbinet taught him the necessity for setting up some sort of a barrier against the enslaughts of office seekers.

In response to President Eliot's lament that since the war young men were at a lost to know how they could honorably serve their country. Mr. McPherson gives a summary of the achievements of GEN. The Letter Carriers' Vacation.

Representatives Cox, of New York, and Ryan, of Kansas, yesterday called upon the postnaster general, and had an interview upon the subject of the letter carriers' annual leaves of absence. The specific appropriation of 550. 000 for this purpose by congress is said to be insufficient to pay substitute letter carriers for periods of more than seven days, instead or the fifteen days allowed by the act. The postnaster general expressed his intention of carrying out the law. He had not obtained a copy of the act, and could not say what action he would take in the matter, but if it allowed in them that the deletions of out of the different days leave, while the appropriation was sufficient for but seven days, he did not doubt that the deletions of out of the different days leave, while the appropriation was sufficient for but seven days, he did not doubt that the deletions of out of the currency, to be levied on the shareholders of the Marine National banks, of New York.
